

THE NUIFC REDISTRICTING UPDATE

A SNAPSHOT OF ARIZONA REDISTRICTING

WHERE WE ARE

On October 29th, 2021 the Arizona Independent Redistricting Commission adopted a final congressional map and began the 30-day public review process before giving final approval. The current proposed map is projected to create five Republican-leaning seats, two Democratic-leaning seats and two highly competitive seats — bad news for multiple Democratic incumbents in the state, according to FiveThirtyEight.

On the Democratic side, Congressmen Greg Stanton of Phoenix and Tom O’Halloran of Sedona have been drawn into districts more favorable to Republicans. In O’Halloran’s case, his new Republican-leaning district, CD2, would match him up with far-right Republican Congressman Paul Gosar of Flagstaff. While CD2 leans Republican, it has the largest share of Native American voters by far of any of the nine districts - 21% in CD2 versus low single digits for the other districts.

These maps ARE NOT FINAL and you can find public hearings schedules are available at az.gov/public-meetings/draft-map-hearings. Tweaks are expected to continue until at least December.

NEW ARIZONA MAPS (PRINCETON GERRYMANDER PROJECT DATA)

POLITICAL BREAKDOWN OF NEW MAPS

Congressional:

- 9 CDs, projected to be a 5R-2D with 2 toss-up

State Senate:

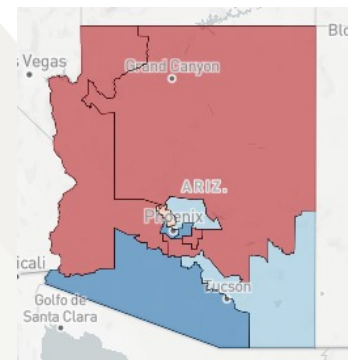

- 30 Districts, projected to be 16R-14D with 5 competitive seats.

2020 ARIZONA CONGRESSIONAL MAP

MAP SHOWS MINORITY VOTING POPULATION

2020 ARIZONA CONGRESSIONAL MAP

MAP SHOWS PARTISAN VOTER SPLIT

*DATA FROM U.S. CENSUS BUREAU & FIVETHIRTYEIGHT.COM & PRINCETON GERRYMANDER PROJECT & LOCAL NEWS SOURCES